

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
CENTRAL DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

Michelene Colette et al,
Plaintiff,
v.
CV Sciences, Inc.,
Defendant.

2:19-cv-10227-VAP-JEM(x)

Order GRANTING IN PART
Defendant’s Motion to Dismiss and STAYING Remaining Causes of Action (Dkt. 39).

United States District Court
Central District of California

Before the Court is Defendant CV Sciences, Inc.’s Motion to Dismiss (the “Motion”). (Dkt. 39). Plaintiffs Michelene Colette and Leticia Shaw filed opposition on April 6, 2020 (Dkt. 43), and Defendant replied on April 20, 2020 (Dkt. 44). The Court deems the Motion suitable for resolution without oral argument pursuant to Local Rule 7-15. After considering all papers filed in support of, and in opposition to, the Motion, the Court GRANTS IN PART the Motion and STAYS the remaining causes of action.

I. BACKGROUND

This lawsuit is one of several in the vanguard of consumer class actions relating to the marketing and sale of cannabidiol (“CBD”) products. Just in the Central and Northern Districts of California, the Court is aware of four similar cases, each filed around the same time and each now facing a pending motion to dismiss. See DaSilva v. Infinite Product Co., No. 2:19-cv-10148, Dkt. 48 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 17, 2020); Davis v. cbdMD, Inc., No. 2:19-cv-10241, Dkt. 40 (C.D. Cal Mar.

1 15, 2020); McCarthy v. Elixinol, LLC, 5:19-CV-07948, Dkt. 34 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 13,
2 2020); McCarthy v. Charlotte’s Web Holdings, Inc., 5:19-cv-07836, Dkt. 33 (N.D.
3 Cal. Mar. 16, 2020).

4
5 Defendant here, a California corporation with its principal place of business
6 in San Diego (Dkt. 35 ¶ 15), produces and sells a range of CBD products, including 7 sprays, oil drops, gummies, capsules, and softgels (id. ¶ 1). Plaintiff Colette is an 8 Arizona citizen who alleges she purchased Defendant’s CBD spray approximately 9 two years ago for $60. (Id. ¶ 13). Plaintiff Shaw is a California citizen who alleges
10 that she purchased six of Defendant’s products between May and December 2018
11 for a total of $377.73. (Id. ¶ 14). Each Plaintiff claims that, had she known CBD
12 products are “not legally sold in the United States,” she would not have purchased 13 them. (Id. ¶¶ 13–14).

14
15 The crux of this lawsuit is Plaintiffs’ allegations that Defendant’s products
16 are illegal under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act of 1938, 21 U.S.C. §
17 301, et seq (“FDCA”). Plaintiffs claim the products run afoul of the FDCA in two 18 ways: first, they “are mislabeled as Dietary Supplements or contain the illegal die-
19 tary ingredient CBD,” and second, Defendant’s CBD spray is intended for sublin-
20 gual use and, therefore, “does not meet the definition of a dietary supplement.”
21 (See generally id. ¶¶ 18–24). The Food and Drug Administration (“FDA”) is ac-
22 tively considering the regulation of CBD products, including the “manufacturing, 23 product quality, marketing, labeling, and sale of products containing cannabis or 24 cannabis-derived products.” See U.S. Food & Drug Admin., Scientific Data and In- 25 formation About Products Containing Cannabis or Cannabis-Derived Compounds;

1 Extension of Comment Period, 84 Fed. Reg. 28822, 28823 (June 20, 2019). Cur-
2 rently, the FDA’s position is that it is illegal under federal law to “add CBD to a 3 food or label CBD as a dietary supplement.” What You Need to Know (And What 4 We’re Working to Find Out) About Products Containing Cannabis or Cannabis-de-
5 derived Compounds, Including CBD (May 5, 2020), https://www.fda.gov/consum-
6 ers/consumer-updates/what-you-need-know-and-what-were-working-find-out-
7 about-products-containing-cannabis-or-cannabis.

8
9 Citing the FDA’s statements on CBD products, Plaintiffs’ First Amended
10 Complaint (“FAC”) brings claims for (1) violation of California’s Unfair
11 Competition Law (“UCL”), (2) violation of California’s false advertising law, (3)
12 violation of California’s Consumer Legal Remedies Act (“CLRA”), (4) breach of 13 express warranty under California law, (5) breach of implied warranty of 14 merchantability under California law, (6) breach of express warranties under 15 Arizona law, (7) breach of implied warranty of merchantability under Arizona law,
16 (8) violation of the Arizona Consumer Fraud Act (“ACFA”), and (9) declaratory
17 judgment. (Dkt. 35 ¶¶ 43–132). Plaintiffs seek to represent a class of “all persons 18 in the United States who purchased [Defendant’s products] during the class period,” 19 as well as California and Arizona subclasses. (Id. ¶ 31–33). Defendant moves to 20 dismiss the FAC for failure to state a claim or, in the alternative, stay the case under 21 the primary jurisdiction doctrine. (See generally Dkt. 39-1).

22 23 II. LEGAL STANDARD

24 A. Motion to Dismiss

25 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) allows a party to bring a motion to 26 dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Rule 12(b)(6)

1 is read along with Rule 8(a), which requires a short, plain statement upon which a 2 pleading shows entitlement to relief. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2); Bell Atl. Corp. v.
3 Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007). When evaluating a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, a 4 court must accept all material allegations in the complaint—as well as any 5 reasonable inferences to be drawn from them—as true and construe them in the 6 light most favorable to the non-moving party. See Doe v. United States, 419 F.3d
7 1058, 1062 (9th Cir. 2005).

8
9 “While a complaint attacked by a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss does not 10 need detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff’s obligation to provide the ‘grounds’ of 11 his ‘entitlement to relief’ requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic 12 recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do.” Twombly, 550 U.S. at 13 555 (citations omitted). Rather, the allegations in the complaint “must be enough to 14 raise a right to relief above the speculative level.” Id.

15
16 To survive a motion to dismiss, a plaintiff must allege “enough facts to state 17 a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.” Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570; Ashcroft v.
18 Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 697 (2009). “The plausibility standard is not akin to a 19 ‘probability requirement,’ but it asks for more than a sheer possibility that a 20 defendant has acted unlawfully. Where a complaint pleads facts that are ‘merely 21 consistent with’ a defendant’s liability, it stops short of the line between possibility 22 and plausibility of ‘entitlement to relief.’” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (quoting 23 Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556).

24
25 The Ninth Circuit has clarified that (1) a complaint must “contain sufficient 26 allegations of underlying facts to give fair notice and to enable the opposing party to

1 defend itself effectively” and (2) “the factual allegations that are taken as true must 2 plausibly suggest an entitlement to relief, such that it is not unfair to require the 3 opposing party to be subjected to the expense of discovery and continued
4 litigation.” Starr v. Baca, 652 F.3d 1202, 1216 (9th Cir. 2011).

6 B. Motion to Stay

7 It is well-established that “[a] district court ‘has broad discretion to stay 8 proceedings as an incident to its power to control its own docket’ in an effort to 9 promote judicial economy.” DeMartini v. Johns, 693 F. App’x 534, 538 (9th Cir.
10 2017) (quoting Clinton v. Jones, 520 U.S. 681, 706–07); see also Landis v. N. Am.
11 Co., 299 U.S. 248, 254–55 (1936) (“[T]he power to stay proceedings is incidental to 12 the power inherent in every court to control the disposition of the causes on its 13 docket with economy of time and effort for itself, for counsel, and for litigants.
14 How this can best be done calls for the exercise of judgment, which must weigh 15 competing interests and maintain an even balance.”).

17 III. DISCUSSION

18 A. Declaratory Relief

19 The Court addresses Plaintiffs’ final cause of action first. In Count Nine, 20 “Plaintiffs seek a declaration that Defendant has misrepresented the nature, 21 ingredients and effectiveness of the Products and that its actions are unlawful.”
22 (Dkt. 35 ¶ 131). This claim for relief arises under the Declaratory Judgment Act, 28
23 U.S.C. § 2201 (“DJA”), which permits a court to “declare the rights and other legal 24 relations of any interested party seeking such declaration.”

1 The DJA authorizes declaratory relief only in “a case of actual controversy.”
2 28 U.S.C. § 2201. “[T]he phrase ‘case of actual controversy’ in the Act refers to the 3 type of ‘Cases’ and ‘Controversies’ that are justiciable under Article III.”
4 MedImmune, Inc. v. Genentech, Inc., 549 U.S. 118, 127 (2007) (citation omitted).
5 “In a class action, the plaintiff class bears the burden of showing that Article III
6 standing exists.” Ellis v. Costco Wholesale Corp., 657 F.3d 970, 978 (9th Cir.
7 2011). Standing requires that (1) “the plaintiff suffered an injury in fact,” (2) “the 8 injury is fairly traceable to the challenged conduct,” and (3) “the injury is likely to 9 be redressed by a favorable decision.” Id. (internal quotation marks omitted).
10 “Standing exists if at least one named plaintiff meets the requirements.” Id.
11 “Basically, the question is whether there is a ‘substantial controversy, between 12 parties having adverse legal interests, of sufficient immediacy and reality to warrant 13 the issuance of a declaratory judgment.’” Phillips & Stevenson, Rutter Group Prac.
14 Guide Fed. Civ. Proc. Before Trial (Nat Ed.) § 10:24 (2020) (quoting Maryland
15 Cas. Co. v. Pacific Coal & Oil Co., 312 US 270, 273 (1941) (emphasis added).

16
17 Defendant argues Plaintiffs lack standing to pursue declaratory relief, 18 “because they do not allege that they intend to purchase CVSI’s CBD products in 19 the future.” (Dkt. 39-1 at 21). Plaintiffs counter that they “face [a] threat of future 20 harm because, while they desire to purchase CBD products in the future, they 21 cannot be certain that Defendant’s representations are true when they see the 22 products on the store shelves.” (Dkt. 43 at 23). This contention is unpersuasive
23 and, indeed, strains credulity. Plaintiffs make it clear they believe Defendant’s 24 products are illegal and mislabeled, and they do not allege they expect to be repeat 25 customers as things stand now. If they did, it would be with full knowledge of 26 Defendant’s alleged misconduct. Under these circumstances, Plaintiffs fail to

1 establish standing for declaratory relief. See Champion v. Old Republic Home Prot.
2 Co., 861 F. Supp. 2d 1139, 1150 (S.D. Cal. 2012) (“Plaintiff’s UCL claim is based
3 entirely on a past transaction. . . . Furthermore, . . . [Plaintiff] now has knowledge
4 of Defendant’s alleged misconduct. Thus, Plaintiff cannot show he is realistically
5 threatened by a repetition of the alleged violation.”); Snyder v. Green Roads of Fla.
6 LLC, 2020 WL 42239, at *4 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 3, 2020) (“Plaintiffs simply have not 7 alleged a likelihood of future injury. In fact, Plaintiffs allegations make clear that 8 they will not purchase more of Defendant’s products so long as the labelling does 9 not meet their standards. Accordingly, Plaintiffs lack standing to assert a claim for 10 injunctive relief.”).

11 12 B. Primary Jurisdiction Doctrine¹

13 “The primary jurisdiction doctrine allows courts to stay proceedings or to 14 dismiss a complaint without prejudice pending the resolution of an issue within the 15 special competence of an administrative agency.” Clark v. Time Warner Cable, 523
16 F.3d 1110, 1114 (9th Cir. 2008). It “is a prudential doctrine under which courts
17 may, under appropriate circumstances, determine that the initial decisionmaking 18 responsibility should be performed by the relevant agency rather than the courts.”
19 GCB Commc’ns, Inc. v. U.S. S. Commc’ns, Inc., 650 F.3d 1257, 1263–64 (9th Cir.
20 2011) (internal quotation marks omitted). “It is useful . . . in instances where the 21 federal courts do have jurisdiction over an issue, but decide that a claim requires 22 resolution of an issue of first impression, or of a particularly complicated issue that 23 Congress has committed to a regulatory agency.” Id. at 1264 (internal quotation 24 marks omitted).

25 _____
26 ¹ Having concluded a stay is appropriate, the Court does not reach the remainder of Defendant’s Motion to Dismiss.

1
2 “Not every case that implicates the expertise of federal agencies warrants
3 invocation of primary jurisdiction. Rather, the doctrine is reserved for a limited set 4 of circumstances that requires resolution of an issue of first impression, or of a 5 particularly complicated issue that Congress has committed to a regulatory agency.”
6 Astiana v. Hain Celestial Group, Inc., 783 F.3d 753, 760 (9th Cir. 2015) (internal 7 quotation marks omitted); see also Clark, 523 F.3d at 1114 (stating the doctrine 8 applies in “limited circumstances” and is “not designed to secure expert advice from 9 agencies every time a court is presented with an issue conceivably within the 10 agency’s ambit.” (internal quotation marks omitted)). The Ninth Circuit has stated 11 that “even when agency expertise would be helpful, a court should not invoke 12 primary jurisdiction when the agency is aware of but has expressed no interest in 13 the subject matter of the litigation[,]” or when “referral to the agency would 14 significantly postpone a ruling that a court is otherwise competent to make.”
15 Astiana, 783 F.3d at 761.

16
17 Defendant asks the Court to “stay the case under the primary jurisdiction
18 doctrine until the FDA concludes ongoing rulemaking on CBD products.” (Dkt. 39-19 1 at 19–20). Regulatory oversight of CBD ingestible products, including labelling, 20 is currently the subject of rulemaking at the FDA. The FDA recently has conducted 21 a public hearing and instituted an agency task force on CBD regulation. 84 Fed.
22 Reg. 12969. In its Notice of Public Hearing, the FDA stated: “Regulatory oversight 23 of products containing cannabis or cannabis derived compounds is complex and 24 involves multiple Federal and State agencies.” Id. at 12970. It also made clear that 25 it was concerned with labelling of products containing cannabis-derived, including 26 hemp-derived, compounds. Id. at 12971–72. Although the FDA rulemaking

1 process is ongoing, the FDA is under considerable pressure from Congress and the 2 industry to expedite the publication of regulations and policy guidance regarding 3 CBD products. See Snyder, 2020 WL 42239, at *6 n.2.

4
5 Courts consider the following non-exhaustive factors in deciding whether the 6 primary jurisdiction doctrine applies: “(1) the need to resolve an issue that (2) has 7 been placed by Congress within the jurisdiction of an administrative body having 8 regulatory authority (3) pursuant to a statute that subjects an industry or activity to a 9 comprehensive regulatory authority that (4) requires expertise or uniformity in 10 administration.” Sytek Semiconductor Co., Ltd. v. Microchip Tech., Inc., 307 F.3d
11 775, 781 (9th Cir. 2002).

12
13 The Court finds the relevant factors here require applying the primary 14 jurisdiction doctrine. This lawsuit raises issues of first impression surrounding how 15 the FDA intends to classify and regulate CBD products; to the Court’s knowledge, 16 the only federal court to confront similar issues also invoked the primary 17 jurisdiction doctrine. See generally Snyder, 2020 WL 42239. Although Plaintiffs 18 rely heavily on the FDA’s November 22, 2019 issuance of warning letters to certain 19 CBD retailers to establish the illegality of Defendant’s actions, “regulatory letters
20 do not constitute final agency action,” Dietary Supplemental Coal., Inc. v. Sullivan, 21 978 F.2d 560, 563 (9th Cir. 1992) (citations omitted). The fact remains that the 22 FDA has not formally established its position. Moreover, the “[r]egulatory 23 oversight of products containing cannabis or cannabis derived compounds is 24 complex and involves multiple Federal and State agencies.” 84 Fed. Reg. 12970.
25 As discussed earlier, Congress has committed regulation of CBD products to the 26 FDA and expects the agency to publish guidance as soon as possible. Finally, the

1 number of CBD class actions currently pending in the federal district courts makes 2 clear the danger of inconsistent adjudications.

3
4 The Snyder court thoughtfully applied the primary jurisdiction factors in a 5 similar case, and the Court adopts its analysis here:

6
7 First, it appears to the Court that the FDA is exercising regula-
8 tory authority over ingestible and other CBD products, but there
9 is uncertainty with respect to whether the FDA will conclude
10 that some or all CBD products are food additives, supplements
11 or nutrients that can be safely marketed to the public and, if nu-12 trients, whether the labelling standards and requirements for 13 CBD products will be different or the same as for other nutrients.
14 Thus, there appears to be a need for consistent guidance. Sec-
15 ond, the FDA appears to be properly exercising their regulatory 16 authority; the FDA regulates, among other matters, food addi-
17 tives, supplements and nutrients, and because ingestible CBD
18 products could be deemed to fall into any of these categories,
19 they are within the FDA’s jurisdiction. Third, the Agriculture
20 Improvement Act of 2018 (the “2018 Farm Bill”), Pub. L. No.
21 115-334, 132 Stat. 4908–11, explicitly recognized the FDA’s au-
22 thority to regulate products containing cannabis-derived com-
23 pounds, including hemp-derived products under the FDCA. 7
24 U.S.C. §§ 1639(o)–(s). Fourth, the exercise of regulatory au-
25 thority by the FDA over the labelling of ingestible CBD products 26 requires both expertise and uniformity in administration. The need is well-illustrated by the fact that, among other issues with which the FDA is concerned, are whether CBD products pose safety risks, how the mode of delivery affects safety, whether there are dosage considerations related to safety, whether there is a need for manufacturing standards, and whether there are standardized definitions for the ingredients in, for example, hemp oil. U.S. Food & Drug Admin., FDA Regulation of Cannabis and Cannabis-Derived Products, Including Cannabidiol

1 (CBD) (content current as of Dec. 31, 2019),
2 https://www.fda.gov/news-events/public-health-focus/fda-regu-
3 lation-cannabis-and-cannabis-derived-products-including-can-
4 nabidiol-cbd. Lastly, the FDA obviously has expressed an active
5 interest in regulating the manufacture and marketing of CBD
6 products. Id. (“FDA continues to be concerned at the prolifera-
7 tion of products asserting to contain CBD that are marketed for 8 therapeutic or medical uses although they have not been ap-
9 proved by the FDA.”); 84 Fed. Reg. 12969 (notice of public 10 hearing).

11 2020 WL 42239, at *7.

12 Plaintiffs offer two reasons the primary jurisdiction doctrine is inapposite 13 here. First, they argue “[a]ny forthcoming regulatory action by the FDA cannot be 14 retroactively applied to class claims accrued prior to enactment of the rule.” (Dkt.
15 43 at 17). Plaintiffs concede, however, that the presumption against retroactivity
16 may be overcome by statutory authorization. (Id. at 18). Whether cannabis 17 regulations will apply retroactively is unknown, but given the widespread use and 18 sale of CBD products—and particularly the large number of states that have 19 legalized their sale—Congress may conclude that fairness, practicality, and comity 20 require retroactive legislation.

21 Second, Plaintiffs assert “[t]he Court does not need the FDA’s guidance to 22 determine whether the CBD products are illegal,” because “consumer class actions 23 based on unlawful, misleading, or deceptive labeling and advertising are areas the 24 courts can address without the need to ‘secure [the FDA’s] expert advice.’” (Dkt.
25 43 at 20 (citing Reid v. Johnson & Johnson, 780 F.3d 952, 967 (9th Cir. 2015))).
26 The cases they cite, however, are distinguishable. In Reid, for instance, the

1 plaintiff’s “claims present[ed] no issues of first impression, as the FDA ha[d]
2 already addressed the substantive issues raised [t]here.” 780 F.3d at 966. The facts
3 showed the FDA had published an interim final rule that covered some of the 4 plaintiff’s claims and was unlikely to announce any other, relevant guidance. Id. at 5 966–67. Here, the FDA has yet to issue rules and is working feverishly to do so. In 6 another case cited by Plaintiffs, Zakaria v. Gerber Prod. Co., the court stated,
7 “Plaintiff raises neither an issue of first impression nor a complex one” and found
8 adjudication did “not present a ‘substantial danger of inconsistent rulings.’” 2015
9 WL 3827654, at *6 (C.D. Cal. June 18, 2015) (quoting Brown v. MCI WorldCom
10 Network Servs., Inc., 277 F.3d 1166, 1173 (9th Cir.2002)). As noted above, there
11 are several CBD-related lawsuits currently making their way through the court
12 systems; inconsistent rulings are likely to follow in the absence of FDA guidance.

13
14 “If a court determines that the doctrine of primary jurisdiction applies, it
15 must either stay the case pending an administrative ruling or dismiss the case
16 without prejudice.” Capaci v. Sports Research Corp., 2020 WL 1482313, at *8 17 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 26, 2020) (citing Astiana, 783 F.3d at 761). “When the purpose of 18 primary jurisdiction is for parties to pursue their administrative remedies, a district
19 court will normally dismiss the case without prejudice. However, when a court 20 invokes primary jurisdiction but further judicial proceedings are contemplated, then 21 jurisdiction should be retained by a stay of proceedings, not relinquished by a 22 dismissal.” Astiana, 783 F.3d at 761 (internal quotation marks and citation
23 omitted). “In either circumstance, the district court must be attuned to the potential
24 prejudice arising from the dismissal of claims.” Id. The Court anticipates further 25 judicial proceedings in this lawsuit. Accordingly, the case will be STAYED until 26

1 the FDA completes its rulemaking regarding the marketing, including labelling, of 2 CBD ingestible products.

3
4 IV. CONCLUSION

5 The Court therefore DISMISSES Plaintiff's request for declaratory relief and 6 STAYS the remaining causes of action. The parties are directed to file joint status
7 reports with the Court every 90 days, beginning on September 1, 2020.

8
9
10 IT IS SO ORDERED.

11
12 Dated: 5/22/20

13
14 Virginia A. Phillips
15 Chief United States District Judge
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26

United States District Court
Central District of California